Nepalese Insurgency (1996 - 2006)

Inspired by the Maoist insurgency in Peru in the early 1990s, the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) – CPN(M) – declared war on the Nepalese government in February 1996. A key demand was the transformation of Nepal from a monarchy into a 'People's Republic'. Following a pronounced Maoist military strategy, the CPN(M) focused their insurgency on the rural areas. They gained significantly in strength and it took heavy international military support to stabilize the Nepalese government in 2002. After public protests escalated in Kathmandu in 2004, the Nepalese King Gyanendra took authoritarian control over the government. In the cities, a strong popular movement for democracy emerged, forcing the government into fast progressing peace negations in 2006 that concluded with the signing of a Comprehensive Peace Accord on 21 November 2006.

Process type Formal structured process

Rationale

While there was no one primary institution, or procedure driving these agreements, it was formal. UN Nepal and Ministry of Peace and Reconstruction archives points out that all the governments between 2007-2010, formed dialogue teams led/coordinated by the Minister of Peace and Reconstruction, despite the Ministers changing along as per the shifts in the government coalition. A dialogue team was set up by the Maoist-led government, which won the elections in April 2008. This dialogue team was again led by the Minister for Peace and Reconstruction, Mr Janardhan Sharma. This team pursued dialogue with the team of Adivasi Tharu Community agitating in the Terai and Nepal Adivasi Janajati Mahsangha to reach this agreement.

Link to national rationale

The demands sought to strengthen the provisions on inclusion in the Constitution process: articulated making process. This agreement sought to ensure that distinct identities of the varied marginalised groups were categorised in the constitutional and legal provisions. It also sought that the government remain committed to Inclusion related provisions in the Interim Constitution.
