Date	30 Mar 1996
Agreement status	Multiparty signed/agreed
Interim arrangement	Yes
Agreement/conflict level	Intrastate/local conflict Ghana: conflict in Northern Region (1994-1996)  Sometimes referred to as the 'Guinea Fowl war' (due to a connection with an argument over guinea fowl in a local village), the civil conflict in the Northern Region of Ghana is estimated to have killed between 2,000 and 15,000 people. Members of the Dagomba, Nanumba and Gonja ethnic groups fought against the Konkomba minority ethnic group, following a failed attempt by the government to stabilise the situation militarily. The conflict ended through an NGO-led peace process which resulted in the Kumasi Peace Accord, which contains a series of bilateral agreements between all of the ethnic groups, and multilateral points of agreement over chieftancy, traditional institutions, land rights, and reconciliation processes. ### Local agreement properties

Process type	Formal structured process
---------------------	---------------------------

Rationale	The peace and reconciliation process between ethnic groups in Northern Ghana was organised and facilitated by an 'inter-NGO Consortium' and the Nairobi Peace Initiative. The process was structured as a series of workshops and consultations, and later, follow-up and planning committees. It was externally funded by donor NGOs and the British High Commission.
------------------	--

Is there a documented link to a national peace process?	No
--	----

Link to national process: articulated rationale	The conflict seems confined to the Northern region of Ghana, and there was no national-level conflict or peace process at the time.
