Ethiopia: conflict in Tigray (2020-)

The Ethiopia and Tigray conflict, also known as the Tigray War, began in November 2020 when Ethiopian Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed ordered a military operation against the Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF), the ruling party of the Tigray region. The conflict erupted after months of political tensions between the TPLF and the federal government, following the postponement of national elections due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The TPLF rejected the delay and held its own regional election in September 2020, which the federal government deemed illegal.

On 24 March 2022, the Ethiopian government declared an indefinite humanitarian truce to allow the delivery of aid into Tigray and initiate talks with the TPLF to end the war. However, the negotiations became hostile, and by August, talks broke down with accusations of refusal to make peace. On 25 October 2022, peace talks involving the Ethiopian government and the TPLF started in South Africa, with hopes low as fighting continued. On 2 November, Ethiopia and the TPLF signed an agreement for a cessation of hostilities, but Eritrea and other warring parties were not involved. On 12 November, both parties signed a deal to allow humanitarian aid into Tigray, and by 29 December, federal police had returned to Tigray, and flights and internet access had been restored.
